Business diary: Eugene Kaspersky

By Mary Watkins

Eugene Kaspersky is CEO of Kaspersky Lab, the Russian security software company. The company is based in Moscow and has offices in Moscow 29 countries. Its main competitor is Symantec. Most of the company's sales are outside Russia.

On some business trips, I only get three or four hours' sleep a night, so Kaspersky spends 50% of his time in Moscow, but the other 50% he informally. Kaspersky normally wears shirts and jeans, but he has a suit for important meetings with 25 presidents and prime ministers.

, he does not get up early, especially after a business trip.

"On some business trips, I only get three or four hours' sleep a night, so I need to relax," says Kaspersky. At the end of a busy Moscow office day, he goes to the gym with his personal travels. He is often away for more than three weeks at a time. When he is away, he attends meetings, goes to trade shows and sometimes gives presentations. When he is in the office, he spends time talking informally to colleagues - at their desks or in the company restaurant.

The Moscow office is like a big family. Many people in the office are friends. Some go on holiday together. Everyone dresses trainer. "It's a great way to relax after a busy day in the office." If he can, 35 he also takes two days off a month.

Holidays are important too. "In winter, I go skiing. In the summer, I often go to the mountains, where I can't use the Internet or my mobile 40 phone. But I can get a satellite connection."

Homework 1 :

A /Work in pairs: Make three word partnerships in each section to find out what four people want from work.

1	high	colleagues	2	company	phone	3	friendly	security	4	fast	facilities
	long	salary		mobile	facilities		travel	opportunities		flexible	promotion
	helpful	holidays		parking	car		job	boss		sports	hours

Homework 2:

B /Match six of the word partnerships in Exercise (A) to their meanings (1-6 ).

- 1 - a lot of money
- 2 - a lot of time away from work
- 3- good people to work with
- 4- the chance to go to different places on business
- 5 - move quickly to a higher position at work
- 6 - you can change the times when you start and finish work
